Independent Study with Judy Southerland

arrive Thursday, June 22 — depart Tuesday, July 4, 2017

With this year of the Venice Biennale, the art of Tintoretto, Titian, and Veronese, Venetians all, will provide fodder for response and engagement by students and artists committed to a personal approach in art making. All skill levels welcome. Work can be realized in a variety of methods and materials, and Judy will guide and facilitate each member of the group in exploring and developing ideas which move into finished work. Exchange of information and group critique will be integral to the studio experience and if past is prologue, visually compelling work with legs will emerge to provide ongoing possibilities for future projects.

Judy Southerland is an artist living and working in Washington DC. Her 2016 solo exhibition, History Painting for a Small Town, was at Studio Gallery in the city and was well reviewed in the Washington Post. Southerland has received three individual artist fellowships from the DC Commission on the Arts and Humanities and has work in public and private collections in the US, England, Italy, France and Singapore. Judy taught fine arts at The Corcoran College of Art + Design for 22 years and has been an instructor at Montorno since 2003.
